MIDNIGHT DISPATCHES.
New York Items.
NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—A special to the New York Times says the controversy about the burning of Columbia, S. C., has received a quasi formal determination by the British-American mixed commission. This controversy grew out of claims for cotton destroyed in the burning of Columbia, which claims were based upon the assumption that the city was burned by Federal soldiers acting under the authority of the Federal Government. The vast amount of testimony taken on the subject was before the commission. After giving it careful attention every one of those claims was disallowed. The total amount claimed was between six and seven million dollars. A semi-official statement of the finances of the Government concludes: "There is no apprehension that Congress will impose additional taxes to supply supposed or actual deficiencies in the receipts, but rather restrict the appropriations to the economical limit and commence the new work that will be actually needed." The Star says the appropriation which Congress will be asked to make at the coming session includes the estimate for the next fiscal year, and a large deficiency for the present year. There is reason to believe that they will be greatly in excess of the appropriation for any year since the beginning of President Grant's administration.

Stokes' new trial has been continued to next term.
There will be no bank statement to-day.
Hawkes & Co.'s hay baling establishment is insured for $75,000. One man was killed and another hurt by the falling walls.

Wall Street is quiet. The general outlook in commercial circles is cheering. The outlook for the coming week is encouraging.
Hon. Horatio Seymour has been nominated from the first Assembly District by the Democrats.

Hon. F. E. Shober, Hon. A. M. Waddell and Col. D. M. Carter, who have been attending the Fair, are still in the city.

Our editorial friends, Major Engelhardt of the Wilmington Journal, and Mr. J. B. Husey, of the Piedmont, will remain in this city until Monday.

During the last two or three days of the Fair there was some excitement about the exhibition, but we believe their depredations did not amount to much.

We were misinformed in regard to the donation of the premium box of tobacco to the Orphan Asylum, by J. Y. Whitted. It was another box that Mr. Whitted gave.

It is intended to publish the premium list entire, officially revised, Tuesday morning. It was not read yesterday, as it was not sufficiently complete for that purpose.

Our readers will please pardon any short comings in our columns this morning, as both our reporters and printers have been broken down by the heavy labors of the past week.

Considering the tremendous crowd of visitors in the city last week, and the high state of excitement which prevailed, remarkable good order was kept. The police discharged their duty well.

The Salisbury Band, on Friday night, serenaded Col. T. M. Holt, President of the State Agricultural Society, Messrs. Kemp P. Battle and John S. Dancy, and Capt. R. T. Fulghum, the efficient Secretary of the Society.

Among the Editors present during the Fair not heretofore mentioned by us were Messrs. Julius A. Bonitz, of the Goldsboro Messenger, and J. McSwain, of the Fayetteville Eagle. These brothers were late reporting. But better late than never.

Prof. August Deopp had a magnificent piano on exhibition in Floral Hall. It was manufactured by Messrs. Inne & Co., New York, especially for the North Carolina State Fair, and obtained the silver medal. It was of elegant finish and exquisite tone.

The following letters are held in the postoffice of this city for lack of proper postage:
Mrs. Vivia Mayo, Hillsboro, N. C.; John H. Haughton, Hillsboro, N. C.; Mrs. M. A. Bobbitt, New Light, Wake county, N. C.; Mrs. J. D. Whitehead, Fayetteville, N. C.; Rhodie Michael, Howard University, Washington, D. C.; J. W. Leslie, N. C.; J. S. Jones, New York; C. Raleigh Hillsboro, N. C.; Miss Jennie L. Wood, 222 West 14th Street, New York.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 18.—The Independent of Old School Presbyterian Synod of Missouri met here yesterday. The most interesting question before the Synod was a proposition to unite with the Southern and Reform Church. A lengthy discussion was had. Rev. Dr. Brooks, of St. Louis, was the most prominent opponent of the proposition. A vote was finally reached last night, and resulted in 47 yeas to 32 nays. THE STATE FAIR.
The Last Day—Closing Scenes, &c.
Yesterday the Thirteenth Annual Fair of the North Carolina Agricultural Society closed its brilliant and successful term.
The attractive programme announced for the day drew an unusual large number of visitors considering the fact that it was the closing day, and until late in the afternoon the crowd lingered around the pleasant scenes of the eventful week.
The exhibitors were busily engaged packing up their goods and chattels for transportation, drays in numbers were passing to and fro, giving an animated, business-like appearance to the grounds that favorably compared with the bustle of the two preceding days.
The programme of the day commenced and ended with the closing RACES.

A premium of $150, offered by the Society for the fastest good horse to be driven in a wagon by his owner, was contested for by Col. M. T. Leach, R. S. Gant, Esq., and Pulaski Cowper. Mr. Cowper's horse evidently won the race, but, because unmanageable and could not be brought to his work. Col. Leach's horse, for style and beauty, would win, but Mr. Gant's horse found it an easy matter to win the race in two heats in 3:37. Had he been pushed he doubtless would have done better. "A trotting race for a purse of $100, best two in three to harness for colts, was next in order. Mr. Young's "Never Mind," Mr. Wemple's "Fly-away," and Mr. Nixon's "Lizzie" won the entries. "Never Mind" won the race, making 3:14 in the best heat.

A foot race between a dozen or more colored boys and men for a $5 purse furnished much amusement to the spectators. No names were taken and the time was disregarded.
The next was a running race in which Mr. Emory's Lightfoot won a single mile heat

The prisoners, who were in the jail, saw the alarm and the escape was prevented.

Says the Asheville Exporter of the 10th inst:

"We are informed by a bachelor friend who is 'posted,' that some 20 years ago, a woman near the mouth of Laurel in Madison county, was the fortunate mother of five babies in one year—three boys in January and two girls in December. And our informant says, it was not a good year for babies either."

Says the Salisbury Watchman of the 6th inst:

"Mr. Wm. Farnel was found dead in the yard in the north point, or junction of the North and South Yards, last Saturday morning. He was accidentally drowned. The Monday before he was in town, bought liquor, and it is said became somewhat intoxicated. After reaching home he proceeded to eat, and in the act of eating, he was overcome by the fumes of the gas, and he died. The body was found by a neighbor, and was taken to the morgue. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death."

For many years the utilization of waste sewage has been discussed in England. Here, we easily dispose of the matter—we poison our rivers and harbors with it. We can find no other way of getting rid of it. Land is cheap, and it is not so difficult to find a place to dump it. In England, and on the Continent, it is different. Every acre is regarded there as of high price. Costly works have been constructed near London and other large cities, and it is alleged that a waste land reclaimed has become exceptionally rich and productive. The most sanguine have been somewhat disappointed this season, however, by the fact that the cows fed on sewage manure have produced milk, and therefore, as grass lands, these lands will be of less future value. For vegetables and hay, however, they will be still desirable. What stable keeper asks where his hay comes from, provided it looks good and is not cheap, or what housekeeper questions as to whether her marketing is grown on sewage soil or otherwise? Now, we find this system is being tried on the Continent. An enterprising Scotchman named Aird, has lately undertaken to introduce the sewage farm system into North Carolina, and has leased, for thirty years, at $6,000 a year, two hundred acres of the sandy waste which lies between the Battle and the port of Danville. On this hitherto barren spot, which has never, it seems, been cultivated since Napoleon surveyed it with a visionary dream of erecting a grand Polish manufactory at the mouth of the Vistula—he is now carrying on operations vigorously. Two hundred acres have been already leveled off, supplied with sewage in the liquid form, and put into root and garden crops, which are visited daily by curious crowds.

A correspondent writing from a Jersey camp near the following:

"Many people sleep in the same tent here, being separated by a partition. A young Methodist fellow from Canada had become quite interested in a pretty daughter of a religious farmer. Last night, while a dozen of old-fashioned fellows were trying to sleep, they heard him say in a low, sweet voice: 'Now, Caroline, dear, let me see the vow do?' 'No, James, I cannot. What would my father and mother say?' replied the sweet, girl-like voice. 'But, Caroline, you have promised to be mine—now let us seal the vow—let us, do let us—won't you?' 'Oh! I cannot—' In a moment the tent partition parted, and a big-whiskered brother, who wanted sleep, shouted: 'For God's sake, Carrie, let me see the vow do! You'll keep us awake all night if you don't! The vow is sealed.'"

A watermelon club has been organized in Troy. One member brings a watermelon each evening in rotation. At the end of the season the member who has brought the largest melon is elected president and is free from the payment of all dues for the ensuing year.

A man who drew a revolver on three pickpockets who were trying to rob him, at Indianapolis, was arrested for carrying concealed weapons. There is nothing equal to the majesty of the law.

THE VAMPIRE SUPERSTITION REVIVED.—This queer fancy has been revived in Europe. It is one of the strangest superstitions that ever existed, and is that a buried man or woman, with his life still conscious, rises from his grave by night and sucks the life-blood of his nearest relatives; and, what is worse than this, every person bitten by the vampire is doomed to follow this dreadful vocation. It is now many years since anything has been heard of the superstition; but two or three law-suits recently decided in Prussia show that it is not dead. One of these has just come to a close, after two years of wrangling. On the 5th of February, 1780, a Polish nobleman of the name of Pobeloki died in Western Prussia. A short time afterward the eldest son died also. Immediately afterwards 4 members of the family were taken sick, and upon consultation together they decided that their father was the vampire, engaged in drinking their blood. One of them therefore determined to apply a remedy, which was to behead the corpse and place its mouth downward. This he succeeded in doing by bribing the undertaker. Subsequently, however, the latter informed the village clergyman and the son of Pobeloki was arrested for desecrating his father's grave. On the trial it was also shown that the blood had been removed from the body, and that the various members of the family drank it. After two years' wrangling the case was dismissed upon the ground that no harm had been done, and that the accused thought they were acting in self-defense. Since that time three or four more cases of a similar nature have been tried, ending in acquittal also. To crush out this horrible superstition it will become necessary for Germany to pass a law against cannibalism, which of itself is a striking monument on nineteenth century civilization.
